

Where Americans Protest About Racial Justice or White Supremacy

The constellations take into account number of protests about a topic, percent of all protests in that place about the topic, and protests per resident. “Stars” in the constellation have (X,Y,Z) criteria. They are linked based on (X)?

The places in the constellations are core-based statistical areas: continuous urban areas and surrounding suburbs, which might contain multiple cities or cross state lines. Places that are not part of a core-based statistical area are included as counties.

Every dot on the map indicates a place with at least one protest related to the topic.

White dots indicate places with disproportionate amounts of protest about the topic. Places with more protests have larger dots.
